

“Now in my 18th year as president of Ringling College, I am so thrilled to have played a part, along with our faculty and staff, in transforming the institution as a whole. Together we have established a challenging, nurturing, inspiring educational environment that fully embraces and encourages creativity on every level. When our students graduate, they are poised and ready to take on the creative career of their dreams. They are the game-changers. Fully understanding the fact that art and design inform every single facet of their lives, they also know it does the same to ours. This is why creativity is the “oil” - the economic energy of the future - and the future is now.”
